As someone who was in DC, the Capitol storming had to be a setup

posted 6 days ago by okayokay +2537 / -0

I was in DC. I found out people were storming at 1:37pm when I called my friend. I found out from a post on here that was 5 minutes old about. Probably sets the storming at 1:30pm or earlier about. Trump stopped speaking at 1:12pm exactly.

Also apparently takes 20-25 minutes to get to the building from the ellipse.

I just can't see people who never started a riot before immediately charging into the Capitol. Especially so soon after Trump stopped speaking.

It was a setup.

Bonus: tweet from CBS reporter who said a crowd was headed to the Capitol before Trump finished:

Of course it was a set up, ANTIFA lead the way and some innocent Trump supporters blindly followed along not understanding what was going on, that much is obvious. This is nothing new, they've been using MAGA protests as propaganda material for the past four years.

Did antifa cut down and roll up two layers of plastic snow fence or did DC police? Same with the metal crowd barriers on 1st avenue.

I got there pretty early and the gates were open and the snow fence was neatly rolled up. Either a set up or Trump supporters were so polite they didn't want to destroy the snow fence.

Immediately was concerned when I saw the guys on the security tower. How did they get on to a locked tower, with a retracting ladder, inside the security perimeter?

From that point on I stayed and watched but knew not to go in the capital because it was a set up.

Btw never saw anyone threaten a capital police officer and never saw any capital police officer threaten anyone. It was like a marshmallow revolution and the capital police I saw were polite. One even handed me a flag that was being trampled....probably fired for her patriotic behavior by now

Ehhhhhh, on the inauguration stage both sides were extremely heated. I was there trying to keep the intensity a little less intense on both sides but i also had no problem with people getting around and commandeering the steps / stage / scaffolding.

I think they are hiding footage from here because it will show the worst police behavior and how easy people could have and did get past them and overwhelm them. It was the most intense area from everything I've seen. Way more back and forth admittedly.

The people i question were the slimy looking youngins on the tower in the middle, camera tower? Shits stayed up there the whole time on megaphone even after the stage was covered in flags and people... cops were allowing it at this point... They kept yelling to "move forward" over and over, i wanted to climb up there and tell them to fuck off but people were going up and down non stop.

there were screaming this shit from start to end, even after respect from both sides was shown after the back and forth and both had stood down.

Not the same as another megaphone user on right scaffolding just starting patriotic chants at this point.

We literally had to hold back one 40ish year old woman from throwing herself at cops. I think herself and others got peppered good. Not sure what else the rage came from. People were also absolutely getting wacked with batons. But then some were wacking back with flagpoles. Which people tried to stop mostly. Then you had dummies throwing scaffolding pipes towards police.

I'm sad i didn't have video of the whole thing or any at all. 95% of people were just standing there, unaware of what was going on, instigators already did what they needed to. Mob mentality on both side was in full affect. Cop's were fucking pissed off and already had to deal with first waves and were using all their non lethal on protestors, many just standing there. I for instance had no idea people already had broke in. Only saw people go and talk about "going" around much later. So then you have people getting pissed off for feeling attacked + the mob mentality.

TLDR; shit was wild at inauguration stage, both sides would look pretty "bad" there.

Also i feel there is a difference between force and violence. There was a lot of force admittedly. Violence was there, but it went both ways and was almost always deescalated on both sides.

Idk what to do with my first hand testimony but i was right there and i've seen no footage of this area / time. At one point 6-8 protestors formed a human chain facing there own protestors with backs to the cops to deescalate.

admittedly I'm a tad relieved because while i didn't participate in any violence that won't matter for the woke mob. But i find it very odd, the lack of video. None of the third party or independent journalists were up there i guess. All followed the stream of people going into and around the sides.

There's a pic in that thread, several antifa (HAD TO BE) dressed in all black with backpacks... How did patriots not put it together? They dressed like they were in Portland and no one said/did anything? I know it was chaos, but only a dumbass would see that and not alert others or take action... The infiltrators were right there in plain view. We knew they'd be there.

About 1/4 to 1/2 the people there were wearing black. People even joked that they were dressed and looked like antifa. People talk to each other and it would be pretty hard to stay undercover at the Trump speech unless you were "press". Immediately surrounding the capitol, things were a bit heated. In there and during the moving phase of the Trump crowd, all of a sudden you can't tell anyone apart or discern their ideology. Anyone can slip in and out of the crowd dressed as anything and do almost anything.

I don't think "trigger happy" is a fair assessment. For the most part the police seem to have been quite restrained. It seems like in some spots they battled those trying to push past barriers, and in others just let people in. They certainly weren't mowing people down with guns left and right.

= Harsh Truth 14 points 6 days ago +14 / -0

So the 3 people killed for excessive tear gas on a peaceful protest is "not trigger happy?" They were popping off canisters like T-shirt's at a hockey game. The police were anything but "restrained" there was nothing to restrain. If singing the Star Spangled Banner on the Capitol steps is worth getting gassed, then yes the police acted perfectly restrained.

From my one point of view I saw no one out of control. Both Patriots and capital police acted reasonably.

I couldn't see everything and I didn't go inside but my eyewitness testimony is I saw nothing violent at all. And tear gas is not violence, that was doing there job, they didn't Kent State anyone outside. But inside someone clearly did.

I was there too man and I can say that we did not reach the front door to the Capitol till at least after 2:20 (based on the times on the vids I took) and my guess would be closer to 3:30-4. At 1:37pm the police line was still out in front of the scaffolding so that timeline doesn't make sense

This is my timeline too, the side wall wasn't climbed until 2:12, this is when the cops just didn't care anymore and everyone started to move wherever they wanted to go, up and down scaffolding as they pleased, up and down the steps, absolutely anywhere, police did not care at all at this point

I was in my way to the Capitol and my friends stopped to eat burgers along the way. Bryson Gray was at the burger place and I took a photo with him - time stamp is 1:22ET. A few minutes after that I was looking at TDW which was where I found out and saw the "PEDES WE NEED BACKUP" and breaking through 4 barricades post. Which I am sure was a trap, tried looking for the post and whoever was baiting must've deleted it.

On the way to the capitol some guy rode up to me on a bike, frantic.

"Hey guys, they tore down the barricade. They're going inside the building right now, I was too cowardly to do it too. But they're in there right now!"

This guy seems like an actor. I literally thought to myself, "it feels like I'm in a movie."

I don't know about a 'crowd' walking to the capital before the speech was over. But there was definitely a steady stream of people leaving the speech. One it was running late. And two it was already stuff that we all knew. On a side note there was someone at the Washington monument that was talking to me saying that the proud boys were planning on storming the capital. He tried to make it sound like he was a proud boy or at least had some inside info. But it was pretty obvious that he wasn't.

I don't care. Only in the fake news does the narrative that it was a bad thing to go to the capitol live. Even normie Trump supporters say it was a good thing, and they wish they went. All I did was go see a speech and fly a flag outside the Capitol and normie supporters are thanking me for going. I feel unworthy as I only got a whiff of tear gas, but I have a flag that was flown outside the Capitol on January 6th, and that is fucking priceless.

So a few frustrated Patriots entered the Capitol, The People's House. MLK - 'Riots are the language of the unheard' People had to sit on their hands for years, not even have a rally because of fear of being attacked by black bloc, they endured the countless assaults on the President quietly. They were all told to save their anger for the ballot box, then that voice was taken away from them. I'm not going to say going into the Capitol was the right thing to do, but I understand why they would have been frustrated enough to do it. One unarmed woman was executed for her beliefs and now 80mil Trump supporters are being executed daily in the papers. This is some bullshit and I'm not playing along with that narrative that enables the same demons on the left to push their extremism and persecution even further.

1. The people who went to the Capitol are heroes. They stood up for what they believe and is right after 4 long years of constant persecution.
2. The frustrated few who entered the building, while not the right thing to do, are understandable after having been persecuted 4 years and having their voice taken from them this election. MLK said 'Riots are the voice of the unheard' and that stands for Jan 6th as well.

I was also there. I left trumps speech with quite a huge crowd, talking about thousands. Around 12:30. We got to the capital at 1:03. It could not have been stormed before that time. We stood and chanted for the better part of an hour. I was at the very front. I got tear gassed for chanting and waving a flag. The capital walls were not "breached" until 2:12pm. If there was any "storming" from people who came from the march it would have had to been after 2:12pm. Any other storming was people who had been there from the start

There were people heading there in the middle of his speech. To be fair, Trump was just going on about all the evidence we already knew and had. And secondly, the people trying to break through the doors in the back were definitely not Antifa. You all need to understand that conservatives are actually capable of growing a pair.

NPR PUBLISHED THEIR ARTICLE AT 9:33AM THAT SO-CALLED 'TRUMP SUPPORTERS' WERE ATTACKING THE CAPITAL.

BUT THIS -

VIDEO EMERGES OF MEN INSIDE CAPITOL HANDING ANTIFA BATS TO USE!!! <https://www.bitchute.com/video/6ULQvjJgnWXU/>

AND THIS -

WATCH CAREFULLY..... RED CAP TRUMPER 'STOPS' A BLACK HELMETED ANTIFA (with spoof Trump bumper sticker on helmet) FROM ATTACKING THE CAPITAL!!! ONLY ANTIFA WOULD INSTIGATE AN ATTACK ON THE CAPITAL BUILDING. <https://twitter.com/emmbeliever/status/1347007733619372035>

ARE CLEAR EVIDENCE THAT ANTIFA WAS INCITING VIOLENCE AND THAT TRUMP CROWDS WERE TRYING TRYING TO "STOP VIOLENCE."

I was there too, quite a bit of people ducked out before the speech was over though (me included, had to pee lol). I also have video of the "front line" barricade. The timeline is the weird since we truly didn't breach until after 3pm

Here is the crowd at 1:04pm <https://i.imgur.com/sjPLide.jpg>

There was a guy with a megaphone at the top of the structure screaming at people to "move forward" and kinda egging people on, who knows which side he was on

Exactly I was 50 feet from Trump speaking and walked directly to the capital after and there were people all the way to the dome at the top by the time I got there.

Those people that started it didn't want to hear Trump speak I can't imagine a real Trump supporter that wouldn't want to hear him.

It's interesting to note that Trump spoke later than officially planned. I think his people knew. So they postponed last minute to mess up their narrative.

I was in front of the Washington monument.

People were leaving early to the Capitol.

I don't know how many "Trump supporters" would travel across the country to hear him speak, just to leave ~10 minutes before his speech was over.

It was cold and damp, and I heard lots of muttering about Trump not saying or doing anything he hadn't said before. Heard one guy say, "I've never walked out of a Trump speech before," as he and his family left. But if people were that disheartened, I don't see them even being willing to follow Trump to the Capitol.

I was there too and think the same thing. My group left the speech early, but stopped to sit and eat and then continued to the capital. When we arrived the breach had already happened. We thought something was going on with all the flash bangs/tear gas. Our phones were not working, so we didn't know exactly what was happening.

I did not go to Capitol after speech. I headed for my hotel going the wrong direction and had to reverse my walk after figuring it out. I was wearing my "Trump" hat. About 5 people in a group were walking towards me, some in MAGA gear. Much younger than me. They looked at me and one said "well, that's subtle" I'm guessing that meant my hat. I turned around as they passed and said "What?" And one said laughing, No, she has kind eyes". They were not like any patriots I met that day. I agree we were infiltrated.

I was in the crowd at the Ellipse. Somehow we were in a travel path so all day people streamed in front of us back and forth. While Trump was still speaking guys with radios got a "go call" and we watched ~20 people quickly pass by us exiting the rally toward the Capitol, they were dressed for action rather than like Trump supporters with Frumpy hats, coats, gloves, scarves, etc.

Well I just Google maps'd it, and it says going down PA Avenue to the Capitol is a 38 min walk. Which I think would take longer with crowds and and people still staying behind to chat and see what else the President does. Point is, was reading the timelines provided and the Capitol got breached before anyone who left the speech got there. They say the Capitol was breached at 1:50, you say the speech ended at 1:12. If you and other people left right at 1:12 exactly, and you got there at the time Google maps says you did. You would have arrived as the Capitol was already breached.

I was there also. Lots of people set off from the Trump speech before he was done because the weather conditions were shit and there were zero bathrooms. So they had to warm up and start searching for bathrooms. The crowd was all pissed off and there were some agitators there with bullhorns saying they were going to storm the capitol. When people got there, the capitol police were very scarce and the only thing to hold people back was simple foot traffic fencing that a toddler could open. So I think the situation was setup between agitators who took advantage of a righteous anger in the crowd which became an angry mob, zero security, etc. The only real security was shoot to kill order for speaker's lobby, apparently. As soon as I saw the situation I knew it was a massive disaster for our side, and didn't partake. Most people heading to the Capitol turned around when they realized what was going down.

I recall a portly bearded man walking through the crowd, a little before POTUS started speaking, stating we start marching to the Capitol 10 minutes into his speech. I didn't pay him much attention because I wanted to hear the speech. I don't recall many people around me leaving either.

I was talking to someone on the steps of the labor building WHILE Trump was speaking (I was watching on my phone since I showed up late).

He and his buddy had already broken in through the first line of defense on the building and were back out trying to find more people to go storm it.

He very specifically said "I want to get in to that building". I asked why, his response "Just need to"

That's when my buddy and I looked at each other and started trying to find antifa coordination peeps. The ones in control had multiple radios.

My friends and I got past the security checkpoint about 10 mins before GEOTUS was done speaking. Constitution Ave. was PACKED. We all started moving toward the Capitol at around 1:15. Mind you, Constitution, Pennsylvania, and Independence Ave. where all the patriots were marching, runs into the Capitol building FROM THE WEST. The breach took place on the east side of the Capitol. All the MSM news shots show black vehicles where the "rioters" were supposedly committing all the violence but I never saw those vehicles. On the west side of the building was the scaffolding and that wooden barricade with the small opening in it and we all stormed but didn't get past the police. I don't think anyone entered the building from the west side at all but their painting us as terrorists and rioters. We were just standing on the building and the stairs chanting to make our voices heard. I was on the side that tore the two huge flags down to suspend them to the scaffolding. We got peppered with tear gas grenades but nobody was substantially harmed from what I could tell and nobody broke any laws. I got to the top when we were all notified the Guard was coming and I was walking away from the Capital right as that convoy of Fairfax County Police showed up. I think you are on to something here, something smells fishy about all this talk of terrorism.
